Just talking about Cups and Challenges with Arden the RPC for P!P and he sent this regarding comp for judges and figured I would share. This would be in addition to the staff promo. It seems like putting some of admission charge is best route to go when we need a judge for a cup. Challenges I think i can scrap our way through

Hi,

So this relates to a League Cup?, Which is held how often?

This could be for cups or challenges depending on the size of the turnout for each. Challenges are once a month and cups when they become available are once a quarter

Thanks,

Hi Greg,

There are some legal implications with that. if they are receiving an hourly wage, then we would have put them on the books as an employee; otherwise, they would have to sign a form as an independent contractor and would be responsible for their tax declarations; we would issue then something like a T4 E, in addition to not being covered by WSIB and insurance while on our premises working.

Hey John

Yeah I think they would be coming in as a volunteer and giving their time to help make the league successful and hopefully bring more business into the shop so could do 5 packs per hour from a booster box and avoid the need for paperwork and legal complications on your side. That being said the person you brought in could also become a professor and handle judgement calls if needed looking at long term goals. They would just need to be up to date on latest regulation rules, usable cards, etc so that when we do premier events then everything is on the up and up.
